Dear Ryan,

On behalf of the United Nations Foundation, I'm writing to invite you to join a congressional learning trip to observe UN peacekeeping and peacebuilding operations in Liberia and Côte d'Ivoire on Saturday, March 24 – Saturday, March 31, 2018.

As you probably know, the UN has played an essential role in helping stabilize and rebuild the Mano River Basin following years of war and volatility. Now, with far-reaching successes in the region, the UN has begun to reduce its peacekeeping footprint in West Africa, providing a rare opportunity for policymakers to examine the lessons learned after more than a decade of international sacrifice and determination.

In Côte d'Ivoire, UNOCI helped broker peace between rebel groups and the government, facilitated the delivery of humanitarian aid, conducted free and fair elections, and facing a torrent of violence following a presidential vote in 2010, honorably protected the country's democratically elected leader. In neighboring Liberia, UNMIL successfully delivered peace to a country in total disarray following years of brutal civil war. Over the lifespan of its mandate, the UN helped rebuild the shattered Liberian government, trained thousands of local police officers, and assisted with the elections that led to the election of Africa's first female head of state. And, in the truest sign yet of the mission's success, Liberia marked a new milestone of stability earlier this month when the country experienced its first peaceful transfer of power since 1944.

This trip is an unrivaled opportunity to see these successes up close and learn more about the UN's transition plan for Liberia and Côte d'Ivoire, including how the U.S. and UN are working together to ensure the two nations have the resources necessary to maintain the progress that's been made.

We would be honored if you would consider joining us on this unique educational experience, which will include visits to both Monrovia and Abidjan over the course of eight days (inclusive of all travel). If you are interested, I would be happy to come by your office and discuss the trip with you in more detail. Please be advised that our deadline for final RSVPs is Monday, Feb. 19.

Sincerely yours,
